

Updated: November 03, 2008 18:19 IST

Home | News | Poll Grind | The India Factor | Profiles | Videos | Photo Gallery

News

California Indians strongly back Obama

Indo-Asian News Service
Wednesday, October 29, 2008 11:35 AM
(Washington)

Indian Americans in California are the strongest Asian supporters of Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama with about two-thirds backing him as against a little over half nationally, according to a new survey.

Voting Indians in California, which has more Asian-Americans than any other state, are the strongest supporters of Obama, preferring him by 62 per cent to just 12 per cent who favour McCain, with 25 per cent still undecided, it says. Nationally, 53 per cent of Indians favour Obama.

On the other end of the spectrum in California were Vietnamese Americans, who favour McCain by 52 per cent to 21 per cent. Asian Americans in California favour Obama by 42 per cent to 24 per cent.

Part of the National Asian American Survey (NAAS), described as the most comprehensive survey of Asian-American political views ever, with 4,394 people surveyed by phone between August 18 and September 26, the poll covered 1,891 Californians, including 229 Indian Americans.

Asian Americans are twice as likely to be Democrat as Republican (33 per cent to 16 per cent), with Indians by far the most Democratic (50 per cent versus just 7 per cent Republicans, 13 per cent Independent and 30 per cent Non-partisan), it said.

Those who think of Asians as socially conservative would be surprised to find that they oppose a ban on same-sex marriage, the survey said noting 57 per cent of likely voters do not support Proposition eight, a ballot initiative which would eliminate the existing right for same-sex couples to marry. Only 32 per cent favour the initiative.

The survey also suggested, "Those who participate in the politics of their home countries in some manner are actually more likely to vote in the United States than those who do not (65 per cent versus 50 per cent)."

One of the authors of the report, Karthick Ramakrishnan, an associate professor of political science at the University of California, Riverside, says Indians have a higher rate of voter participation than many other Asian groups, but the same advantage does not extend to other forms of political participation.

In his view, higher Indian voter participation is likely due to three main factors:

South Asians tend to have higher incomes than other groups

they have the highest levels of English proficiency they have stronger party identification than many other Asian groups.

"Still, their participation is lower than the national average, with lower party attachments and lack of voter mobilisation being an important factor," Ramakrishnan told the South Asian Journalists Association (SAJA) forum.

Identification of Indians with the Democratic Party is very strong, second only to Japanese Americans, who traditionally have been very strongly pro-Democrat, he says. Still, one half are either Independent or Non-Partisan and don't think of themselves in terms of party labels.

On the findings that people who pay attention to homeland politics are more active in American politics, Ramakrishnan says, "My hunch has always been that people who are active in homeland politics are inherently interested in politics. So there is no necessary tradeoff between homeland and domestic participation."

"Indeed, given the importance of US foreign policy in South Asia, and the

Poll Grind

more » ADVERTISEMENT

- ABC of Primary and Caucus
- Election calendar
- Popular US presidents
- Govt and politics in US
- Key facts about USA
- Did you know?

Primary results

Electoral process

Calendar of events

News Analysis

more »

Obama's Man Friday a hit in US

NDTV Correspondent
Reggie Love is America's best known body boy and Barack Obama's Man Friday. He is topping popularity .....

Politics of fear in US elections

Sarah Jacob
As Barack Obama surges ahead in polls in states across America with just 11 days to Election Day, th .....

Have Your Say

Voices: People of Indian origin have their own share of problems and issues in US. Join our poll and decide for yourself who is the best bet for you

Poll

Q. Who will be more India friendly?

- Barack Obama
- John McCain

VOTE

SMS Us

Back

Forums

Has Barack Obama changed his policy towards India?

Messages: Post | Read

Profiles

more »

growing business ties and economic interdependence, it is understandable that interest in the homeland will help foster participation in the US," he says.

Rate The Story :

Email | Print | Read Comments | Post Comments

My Yahoo Digg it re:ditt Del.icio.us Newsvine

Interesting facts about Joe Biden

NDTV Correspondent
It's just about a week before the US election day on November 4.

Sarah Palin - McCain's glamour quotient?

NDTV Correspondent
Alaska Governor Sarah Palin's candidature has surprised the world.

Other News

- Kenya witch doctor predicts Obama win
- US polls: Obama's lead narrows marginally
- Chavez hopes Obama wins US Prez polls, ends Cuba embargo
- Bush's efforts for India will not fetch votes
- Obama loses a point to McCain, keeps overall lead
- Sarah Palin hoaxed by comedy prank call

Videos Photo Gallery

Obama or McCain: Who is better for India?

US economy and scope of work for Indian IT industries

US elections hold key to Indian outsourcing

McCain's campaign disappointing: NYT